How to improve your spoken English

Many students ask me how to improve spoken English. Here are some suggestions.

To improve your spoken English, the best thing you can do is to listen to daily conversations of native English speakers. So it's a good idea to listen to the English radio and English songs. It's not necessary for you to understand each word, but just grasp the key words and meanings. After listening, you can talk about them with your partners. It is also necessary to master grammar well. Having a good knowledge of grammar can help you to communicate well with others. Last but not least, enough vocabulary is also needed. You should at least master 5,000 words so that you can easily express your ideas well.

I hope these suggestions can help you.

Safety is very important to everyone. We middle school students are like precious flowers—so our safety is becoming the focus of attention. Here are some important safety tips to remember.

Firstly, we must obey the traffic rules when we go out. Don't cross the street when the traffic lights are red. Secondly, we should eat healthy food. Don't eat junk food. Eat more fruit and vegetables. Finally, be careful not to hurt ourselves while playing outside. It's dangerous to go swimming by ourselves, so don't go swimming without permission.
