1. One possible version:

“A friend in need is a friend indeed.” It’s true, and in my opinion, the most important about friendship is helping each other.

My school held a violin competition and my friend Lucy encouraged me to enter it. She bought books about how to play the violin for me. Thanks to her, I became confident. I practised it hard for 2 hours every day. At last, I won the second prize in the competition.

I owe my success to the help of Lucy. I think we’ll be friends forever.

2. One possible version:

I still remember my story with volleyball because I have learned a lot from it.

There was an interview in my school volleyball team. I took part in it, but I failed. I was so sad that I even wanted to give up playing volleyball. However, playing volleyball on the school team was my dream and I must follow it. So every day, I came to school early to practise it as much as possible. At last, I joined the school volleyball team successfully.

From this experience, I know the real meaning of following dreams and understand nothing is impossible if you try hard!

3. One possible version:

The hobby that makes me grow up

It’s music that has made me grow up.

As a little kid, my parents often took me to concerts to enjoy different kinds of music. Even at home, my family had a music party at weekends. Step by step, I fell in love with music. I even began to compose my own songs and became leader of our school band. This year, I was lucky to win the first prize at our school music festival.

Now music has been part of my life. It not only brings me more happiness, but also makes me feel more confident about myself.

4. One possible version:

Dear Frank,

How are you? I am sorry to hear that you quarrelled with your parents about playing mobile phone games.

I don’t think you should spend too much time playing phone games. It is bad not only for your body but also for your study.

Here are my suggestions.

Firstly, you should stop playing phone games. And you can use your mobile phone to search for information as well as looking up new words. After all, it is a useful tool in your study.

Besides, spending too much time on your mobile phone keeps you away from the real world. You need to communicate with your parents and teachers face to face. Let them know your problems. As a result, they will help you.

I sincerely hope my suggestions will help you out.

Yours,

Lingling
